International Women’s Day Celebration at RMGC

In the mining industry, women make up 8-12 percent of the global mining workforce. Women in mining work in a variety of roles, including labor intensive, technically skilled, and managerial positions. That is no different at Round Mountain Gold where women are an important part of the workforce.

While seeing women in various roles around the mine site is common in 2023, it wasn't always. Just over a hundred years ago, women were fighting for their place in the workforce. Since then, women all over the world celebrate International Women's Day.

International Women's Day is celebrated on March 8 each year. This is the day set aside to honor the social, economic, cultural, and political achievements of women. The foundation of International Women's Day began in 1908 as women workers in the needle trades marched through New York City to protest child labor, sweatshop working conditions, and demand women's suffrage, as seen at right. Beginning in 1910, March 8 was noted and observed as International Women's Day (IWD).

Each year, attention is brought to some challenges women face in the workforce. A world free of bias, stereotypes, and discrimination is what's behind IWD. Celebrating women's achievements and raising awareness of the discrimination that still occurs takes a collaborative effort at any place of employment.

At RMGC this year, International Women's Day is recognized with a breakfast and lunch, celebrations, and some education. Instructors for the event were Nicole Silberschlag, Safety Superintendent; Lauren Shylock, Metallurgist; Liz Hughes, Tech Services Manager; and Isabella Gredzinski, Senior Geologist. They organized activities and workshops to illustrate the challenges women continue to face in the workforce.

(from page 2) participants realized their privileges or marginalization are integral to who they are. Realizing these also help participants have a better relationship with themselves and others.

Another activity had participants challenge limiting beliefs. This activity's main purpose was to examine how thoughts drive results and how to change negative thoughts to positive ones. Another highlight of the event was that Kinross COO Claude Schimper and his wife Heidi Mae presented a workshop. (pictured right).

A special thanks goes to Nicole, Lauren, Liz, and Isabella. These strong women organizers have paved paths for future generations of women to achieve leadership rolls. Not only do they champion for women, they champion for all miners.

Town Begins Work to Update Utility Ordinance

Round Mountain Town Board members have at their last town board meeting on Tuesday, Feb. 28 considered revisions to the town’s ordinance governing water and sewer. Members could be taking action on March 14 on portions of Round Mountain Town Ordinance 8 – which includes changes on disconnect procedures, electronic payments and requirement of deposits for customers in good standing. The draft ordinance is available for review at the Town Hall offices located at 100 Hadley Circle. A public hearing will be held on March 14 at 5:35 p.m. at the Donald L. Simpson Community Center where residents can voice their concern regarding such changes. If you have any questions, call 775-377-2508 or stop by Town Hall for more information.

Library Park Passes Available at RMPL

Library Park Pass Program offers a new way for Nevadans to “Check out their State Parks”

The Nevada Division of State Parks is excited to announce a new way for Nevadans to check out their State Parks – by borrowing a park pass from their local public library. The new Library Park Passes cover the day-use entrance fee for one passenger vehicle with up to eight people, and may be borrowed for one week, then returned to the library for others to check out. Each public library in Nevada has been provided with two passes that can be checked out by library patrons. This new program will provide more Nevadans with opportunities to discover their spectacular State Parks by removing barriers and creating more equitable access to nature.

“I thank Nevada’s public libraries for supporting our efforts to provide outdoor access for all,” said Nevada State Parks Administrator Bob Mergell. “By making libraries a gateway to State Parks, our goal is to help more Nevadans explore the outdoors, while creating healthier communities with stronger connections to Nevada’s spectacular natural and cultural resources.”

The new Library Parks Pass Program is a collaboration between Nevada State Parks and Nevada’s system of public libraries and is funded by the Nevada State Parks Gift Shop Grant Program, which allocates the proceeds from its Gift Shop sales to educational and interpretive programs in Nevada’s State Parks. Park fees may be assessed for boating, camping, or other specific fees including special programs or tours. The pass does not include federal, regional, or other public lands in Nevada that are not part the Nevada State Park system.

To learn more about Nevada’s Library Park Pass Program, visit parks.nv.gov/checkoutnvstateparks.
